

After a first successful event in Lausanne, Switzerland, Going Solo is coming to the UK!

An International Educational Conference

About Going Solo

Going Solo is a unique conference, focused on the new web-enabled generation of freelancers and small business owners. After a very successful first event in Lausanne, Switzerland, the conference is taking place again in Leeds, UK. There are plans to produce the event elsewhere in Europe and in the US.

Over 100 professionals are expected for an intensive one-day education experience, where a core group of international speakers will cover future trends, current best practices, and business experience. The goal of the event is to provide a platform for freelancers and small business owners to build business relationships, acquire new tools and knowledge, and establish a larger European community of practice.

Who is attending Going Solo?

Going Solo attracts entrepreneurial freelancers, niche business owners, and professionals working in media, tech, design, publishing, and related service industries. Through their extended networks of practice, these attendees touch several leading businesses and nonprofits across Europe, shaping purchasing decisions and guiding corporate strategy.

About Going Far

Going Far aims to produce intimate events on focused topics in and around Europe. Content is high-quality and has an impact on what people are actually doing. Going Far seeks sponsors that can add value to the attendees' conference experience.

What are the benefits of sponsorship?

As a sponsor, your company will gain direct access to this select group of highly competent professionals on the cutting edge of the media, tech, design, publishing, and related service industries. These freelancers are an influential audience looking to Going Solo for solutions to help them be more successful at what they do. These solutions come from Going Solo's content and from the sponsors' products and services.
